

Chief Acoose, dead near Grenfell, Saskatchewan, deserves your admiration. The old chief, nearly 100 years of age, is the Indian that once chased an elk, on foot, for 70 miles, killing the elk when it could run no longer. Man "fearfully and wonderfully made" can outrun any animal, in time.

When Arbuckle, the coffee man, sent a wild horse to Rosa Bonheur, he hired men to follow the horse on foot, never letting it stop to rest, finally capturing it.

No horse living could run as far in six days as a man on Long Island can run. A famous Irish runner, afterwards elected mayor, ran more than 600 miles in six days, in old Madison Square Garden.
